To Learn How to Let Go.

There is a lesson, only learned as we grow old, which lighten materially the burden which was borne in earlier years. It is a lesson very slowly and very hardly learned, through a discipline which hardly will be called heart-breaking. I am not thinking nor of the leaving go our hold upon those who must go before us from this world, but only of the ceasing to hold, or we think we hold, in our protecting grasp those who must go out from us, who must go away. You fancied you must keep your children always about you; that you could not live unless you had your arm (so to speak) round them all; that you could not live unless this were so. Even when one another must go out from under the roof, you seemed still to be keeping your hold of them; still directing what they should do, or had to learn to let go. You could not keep your hold; it was needless: they did not want you to do it. It is natural to desire to keep in your hand all that you care for. I remember well how one, who after many years of modest means, suddenly succeeded to a large fortune, was bewildered on learning in how many various ways and places these scores of thousands were invested, and said earnestly, "I wish I had it all tied up in a bag and put under my pillow." So would simple-minded parents keep their children under the paternal roof. Of course it cannot be; and you must be reconciled, as you can, to your boys being far away. "I have them in every corner of this world," a worn mother said to me the other day, speaking of the boys and girls of a great household, which the last few years have scattered wide. "I did not think I could have lived, but you see I am living after all." The words were said with a very sad smile. Yes, you are living and working; but the absent are never forgotten, certainly never for a single day. It remains strange that the bright face has gone out from your door, and that going about your vocations you never can meet, in the familiar ways around, the hopeful presence, nor hear the pleasant voice. The letters from a distant country are well, and you make much of them; but no page that ever pen traveled over can look at you like the kindly, familiar face, like the glistening eye. Still, you go out cheerfully on the day which brings the Australian or Indian mail; and you learn gradually that they can do without you, can stand well on their own feet now, have got out of your charge and care. You have let them go. Perhaps it was falling to a lower level when you did so. But the burden is a little lightened. You have not so much to do as you once thought you had. Possibly you were never doing so much as you vainly fancied.—Fraser's Magazine.

Judge Whiting was Chief Justice of Wisconsin, about forty years ago. Justice Woodle was an Associate Judge. Whiting was not considered a very brilliant man, but, though his perceptions were sluggish, his motives were always trustworthy. Judge Whiting and Justice Woodle were traveling together, hearing appeals from nisi prius terms. They traveled on horseback, and on one occasion occupied a room together, Judge Whiting had a shapely foot (a fact which he was suspected of knowing as well as anybody). Judge Woodle had club feet (as to which he was suspected of being very sensitive). On the occasion we speak of, Judge Whiting was lying stretched on the only bed there was in the room, with one of his shapely feet extended out of the bed. He looked up and saw Judge Woodle looking at the foot intently.

"What are you looking at?" said Judge Whiting.

"At your foot, Whiting," said Woodle. "And do you know, if I had your feet I would be almost willing to have your head?"

A good story is told of the late Chief Cockburn. He was once counsel for the plaintiff in a certain case, and a Mr. B—was for the defendant. Cockburn called a witness, and proceeded to examine him. "I understand," he said, "that you called on the plaintiff, Mr. Jones; is that so?"

"Yes," replied the man.

"What did he say?" demanded Cockburn.

Mr. B—promptly rose and objected. The conversation could not be admitted as evidence. But Cockburn persisted, and Mr. B—thereupon appealed to the judges, who after a time retired to consider the point. They were absent for nearly half an hour, and when they returned they announced that Mr. Cockburn might put his question.

"Well, what did he say?"

"Please, sir, he wasn't at home," replied the witness, without moving a muscle.

A man bought an estate in Ireland the other day. He was of small stature, we are told, and very thin and wiry-looking. When he went down to see the place, the tenants turned out to inspect the new landlord, and after his departure began to discuss him.

"Well, Pat, what do you think of the new landlord?"

"Oh, begorra, not much. Why, that little gossoon would be as hard to shoot as a jack-snipe."

Irascible old party: "Conductor, why didn't you wake me up when I asked you? I am miles beyond my station." Conductor: "I did try, but all I could get out of you was, 'All right, Marie; get the children their breakfast, and I'll be down in a minute.'"

Only a Common Fly.

No part of fly structure is more wonderful than the mouth. Watch a common fly alight on a piece of sugar. From the under surface of the head, apparently, is unfolded a long organ looking very much like an additional leg; and with this structure the fly scrapes the sugar, licks up the cream, spoilates the jam, and, as we shall presently note, effects destruction in other and varied ways. To understand what the organ in question is, let us briefly glance at the typical structure of the insect-mouth. Four sets of organs or appendages compose the mouth. There is first an upper lip, then a pair of large jaws, and then a pair of lesser jaws—forming a tube or tongue in butterflies—and last of all a lower lip. In a beetle the chief mouth organs are the greater and lesser jaws; whilst in a bee or wasp the jaws are also well developed for the work of the hive, but the under lip forms a tongue wherewith the bee sucks up honey from the flowers. Now in the fly, the mouth parts are of modified nature. Speaking generally, the jaws are represented by small bristle-like organs, and the upper lip is developed; but it is the labium or under lip which comes to the front in the development of the fly's mouth. Here it forms, as in the bees, the chief organ of nutrition. It is the under lip which we see unfolded beneath the head when the fly attacks the sugar. And when we place this organ beneath the object-glass of our microscope we can readily discover the secret of its service. The tongue, as we may term the under lip, consists of a stalk highly movable and muscular, at the end of which a couple of broad leaves expand outwards from the middle to form a sucker-like organ, beautifully adapted for licking up fluids and for scratching solid matters also. This fan-like end is supported on a firm tubular frame-work acting as a set of springs to open and shut the jaws, whilst the microscope shows us that this structure is really like a file or rasp in its nature.—We can understand, then, readily enough how such a muscular organ can be used for the purposes of fly nourishment. When after a Summer of flies, the morocco covers of our books and the finely polished surfaces of our furniture are scratched and eroded, we can readily appreciate the cause of the damage. The fly's tongue is a file wherewith it wages war even on ourselves. For, as a famous authority on insects remarks, it is by its means that the fly "teases us in the heat of Summer, when it alights on the hand or face to sip the perspiration as it exudes from, and is condensed upon the skin."—Cassell's Family Magazine.

The Kangaroo.

A WILD kangaroo is a more formidable beast than might be supposed. Standing at bay, in fighting attitude, on the tripod of his legs and tail, sometimes seven feet high, a solitary "forester" is not to be trifled with. The arms of such a beast are as long as those of a man, and his hand-like paws have sharp hooked claws. With these he will spar against a couple of powerful hounds like a boxer, and woe betide the unfortunate puppy that ventures within the reach of those sinewy limbs; he will be held for a moment in a strong grip, while a downward blow from the hindfoot, armed with its sharp long claws, rips him down from shoulder to tail. Sew up the gash, apply the black fellow's remedy—a little dry dust—and let him take his chances to die or crawl home a wiser hound. An old dog will wait his chance, make a flank attack, and get hold of the enemy by the tail, when over he goes, and is soon worried to death. A kangaroo always takes to the water, where he will stand as deep as he can, and methodically drown any dogs which venture within his reach. A stockman in Australia, while looking for tracks along the boundary of his run, heard a dog barking—a sound sure attract a bushman's attention, as it would portend something wrong with a flock of sheep. Riding over in the direction of the sound, he found a shepherd in the grasp of a big old kangaroo, holding on for his life to a root in the bank of the creek. The kangaroo had been chased into the creek by the shepherd's dog, which had gone into the water after him, and would have been incontinently drowned had not his master gone to the rescue. The kangaroo, leaving the dog, and seized the man, and was doing his best to drown him, which he would most likely have done had the stockman not heard the frantic barking of the dog, and interfered with a big stick. The writer has never seen a kangaroo swim, though they always take to the water, when hard pressed, like deer. A mob of kangaroos running look very like fallow deer at a distance. When sitting up unmovable on the watch they look so like gray stumps as to be indistinguishable to the inexperienced eye. They look very ghostly and uncanny as they go into water on bright moonlight nights.

Pashence iz a good thing for a man to hav, but when he has got so much ov it that he kan fish all day over the side ov a boat' without eny bait on his hook lazyness iz what's the matter ov him.—Josh Billings.

Wise men mingle innocent mirth with their cares as a help either to forget or overcome them, but to resort to intoxication for the ease of one's mind is to cure melancholy with madness.

Usefulness of Birds at Sea.

The pleasure of watching birds at sea, whether in the air or skimming the ocean wave's crest, is to many minds very keen. And there is something more too to be considered. Mariners can often tell their way by these birds, especially when nearing a coast. I well remember how I used to watch for them on approaching certain coasts, such as parts of Patagonia, too low to be seen at the ordinary distance. Once, when coming from Monte Video, with a mail and important Government dispatches on board for the Falkland Islands, I was able to run on my course in safety, owing to a particular bird having joined company with us. On the occasion I refer to we were approaching the land in thick, misty weather, with a strong, fair breeze. It had been clouded over for a day or two, so that my solar observations were somewhat doubtful. I was anxious, for it was drawing toward evening, and I wished to get into Port Stanley with the mail that night. It was, however, so thick that we could not see a mile ahead. Presently a shrill noise was heard, a flapping of wings made us look round and above; and soon we saw what we call the "pilot" bird. I knew my distance now, for these birds never fly beyond so many miles from land. Therefore, we cautiously ran on until I caught a glimpse of a bluff cape, then steered more easterly, till after dark, with a clearer night, I sighted Cape Pembroke light, and knowing the passages well, worked my vessel up Port William, then shot through the "Narrows," and anchored in Port Stanley, nearly opposite Government House about 1 o'clock in the morning. Next day I was thanked by his Excellency the Governor—himself a high naval officer—for the quick trip made, and the dispatches beside long-wished for private correspondence, we had brought. But to this day I thank God's feathered pilots, who had then and often shown me the way.—Chamber's Journal.

MISTAKES OF THE COMPOSITOR.—Some one has taken the pains to collect for the Chicago Times some of the more famous typographical blunders of recent days—of the proof reader on the Herald who underscored the last line of the hymn, "Hark, the Herald angels sing!" so as to give the credit to his own paper; of the World's report of a political meeting—"the snouts (for shouts) of 10,000 Democrats rent the air;" of Gath's Fourth of July oration about the effect of the immortal declaration penned by Thomas Jefferson, at which "Thomas reeled," he was made to say, instead of "thrones reeled;" a local reporter represented Talmage as reading the well-known hymn thus: "Nearer, by God, to Thee!" Instead of the fiat of the Almighty, a New York paper spoke of the "fist of the Almighty." Another paper declared that the Meeker massacre was caused, not as the dispatch said, "by the farmers pulling down the Indians' tents and corrals," but "the Indians' beets and carrots." Out West the obituary of a right reverend "prelate" was described as the "death of a pirate;" in a sermon a clergyman was announced as preaching about "a woman clothed in scantity" instead of sanctity; and the subject, "Influence of Rome on the formation of Christianity," got into print as the "Influence of Rum upon the digestion of humanity." The compiler should have added to his collection the story of the new Connecticut editor who wrote what he supposed to be an unusually fine article entitled, "Is there no balm in Gilead?" and awoke next morning to see it read, "Is there no barn in Guilford?"

SCIENCE ON THE RAILROAD.—An oddlooking car has been run over the eastern part of the Erie Railroad recently. The top of it was covered with windmills and revolving cups, so that it looked like the roof of a signal service station. The object was to test the pressure of the atmosphere on cars going at different rates of speed, so as to determine of what shape to make the front of the cars in order best to resist this pressure, which is very great. In the cabooses attached to freight trains on the Erie Railroad there is placed an automatic contrivance called the "telltale," which registers all the stoppages and the rate of speed over every foot of the road. Freight trains are not allowed to run more than fifteen miles an hour, and if this rate is exceeded the fact is at once disclosed on inspection of the apparatus.

An Englishman at a hotel in New York asked if there were any oysters in the hotel. "Oh, yes!" was the answer, "Step right into the restaurant. We don't keep them in the office." I think you misunderstand me," said Mr. John Bull, "you know, I mean a 'oister, don't you know, a lift—a hellevator, may be you call it in this country."

A New Hampshire farmer recently agreed to sell his farm for $2,000, but when the day came he told the expectant purchaser that his wife was in hysterics about the trade, and he "guessed he'd have to back out." The purchaser complained, and finally asked how much more would induce him to sell. "Well," replied the thrifty son of the Granite State, "give me $250 more and we'll let her cry."—[Boston Transcript.

Scandal has been created in Bayswater, London, by some unkind wag who filled the offertory bags with large H's cut out of cardboard, the clergyman being famous for dropping that ill-used letter.

AMERICAN INDUSTRIES.

American goods are finding markets in all sections of the world, and successfully competing with foreign products. Our cotton goods of all kinds, and spool thread are rapidly driving the English from the markets. Our silks are finding their way into France. Our printing and wrapping paper meets with a ready sale in the East and West Indies, while bank note and bond paper is largely sold in Austria, Italy and Spain. Our cutlery is in demand in Birmingham—the English cutlery manufacturing emporium. American locks are in use in all civilized countries. In Australia and New Zealand our axes and other edge tools have supplanted English make. One of the largest hardware importers in Melbourne advised his Birmingham correspondent that it was utterly impossible to sell English edge tools; that mechanics preferred American tools; they were superior in quality, style and finish; they were better adapted to the work and cheaper. Our trade with Mexico has increased sixty per cent, during the past eighteen months, principally machinery and hardware of all kinds. This crowding of Foreign goods to the wall is attributable to the inventive genius and enterprise of Americans, and the intelligence and independence of our mechanics, and the protection extended to all branches of industry by the National Government. The introduction of all manner of improved mechanism has enabled the United States to reach a high state of perfection in its manufactures, and the work still goes on. Of course, improved appliances are used in other countries, but in the hands of their workmen they are simply mechanically worked, as they are, without thought or reflection. Not so, however, with the American mechanic. His intelligence prompts him to investigate and study the workings of the machinery connected with his calling, and devise improvements; hence the extraordinary progress of this country.

A MORNING EDITION.—Owing to the new mail arrangements the San Francisco Bulletin issues a morning edition at 6:30 for its subscribers in the interior. This enterprise is commendable. The Bulletin has but few equals; it is a first-class newspaper, and its new departure will tend to increase its circulation, particularly among business men in the interior counties.

There are on Lake Michigan fifty steamers of from 800 to 1,000 tons, and more than that number exceeding 1,000. There are on the stocks forty of 2,000 tons and over, several ranging from 2,500 to 2,800. Some cost $125,000, and have capacity for 80,000 bushels of grain. A vessel is being built at Toledo, Ohio, which will be 278 feet long, 40 feet breath of beam, and 24 feet, 8 inches depth of hold, have five masts with a spread of 5,500 yards of canvas, capacity, 140,000 bushels of grain; cost, $95,000.

The Star and Herald of Panama says: A war of races has broken out in the valley of Contele, where more than 2,000 Chinamen have been barbarously murdered by the negroes and Cholos. On one plantation 600 inoffensive men were murdered in cold blood. All the cane fields, sugar houses, machinery, etc., were burned, and property to the value of millions has been wrecked. All foreigners have fled the valley, one of the most fertile and productive in Peru. Some of them were killed. The work of murder and plunder is still going on.

Major C. Maurice Smith was recently killed in Caroline county Virginia by a runaway team April 4th. He was District Attorney of Utah under Judge Sinclair, and made himself famous by prosecuting the men connected with the Mountain Meadows massacre. Lately he has been engaged in journalism.

A few days since eight barges in tow of a steamer left St. Louis for New Orleans with 20,848,960 pounds of grain for export. There is a bright future for New Orleans. It exports of grain will be immense, and it will direct tonnage from New York and San Francisco.

The Legislature met in special session on Monday last, and it is now wrestling with the work laid out by the Governor. It is doubtful whether an apportionment bil can be passed.

Mrs. Upright, the young woman shot at Stanton, Michigan, by her husband on March 19th, died Sunday, having lived fifteen days after being shot through the brain.

Senator Conkling has notified the people of this great Nation that he will not darken the doors of the White House while that stately mansion is occupied by James A. Garfield; but we notice that he has not yet notified Mrs. Kate Sprague that he will not again darken her doors, for on Saturday last that female gave a grand dinner to the immaculate Senator and a few boon companions, but the Senator's wife was not one of the happy guests. And this man aspires to run the Government instead of allowing President Garfield to attend to that little matter.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Trial of Sam Chung.—The second trial of Sam Chung, for the murder of a Mexican, near Bodie, in July last, has occupied the Superior Court, Department No. 1, Hon. R. M. Briggs, Judge, presiding, all the week, up to 10 o'clock this morning. A jury was obtained without much difficulty on Monday afternoon, and the examination commenced. The prosecution was conducted by District Attorney Parker and John A. McQuaid, Attorney for the County. The prisoner was defended by Kittrell & Owen. The case was closely contested, particularly by General Kittrell, who contested every inch of ground traveled over by the prosecution in the examination of its witnesses. The examination closed at a late hour on Thursday afternoon, and yesterday morning the arguments commenced, District Attorney Parker opening on the part of the people, and favoring the jury with a short "talk," and was followed by General Kittrell, who addressed the jury nearly four hours in behalf of his celestial client. The General was very severe on the witnesses for the prosecution, and his address, we must say, was replete with truths very plainly spoken. Mr. McQuaid closed for the prosecution, and spoke temperately and impartially about two hours. The Court then ordered a recess of five minutes, after which Judge Briggs charged the jury, including instructions asked for by both the prosecution and defense. The Judge charged that under the indictment upon which Chung had been tried the jury could return a verdict of guilty of murder, fixing the penalty, death or life imprisonment; murder in the second degree, or manslaughter.—At 5:15 the jury retired in charge of Deputy Sheriff Vile. At 9:15 last evening the jury went into Court and Col. Jackson, the foreman informed the Court that it was impossible to come to an agreement. The Judge sent them back, and then went home and retired, leaving the jury to cogitate until the Court opened at 10 o'clock this morning, when they filed into Court and asked to be discharged, being unable to agree. Their request was granted, and thus ended the second chapter in the Sam Chung case. The matter of a third trial will be considered on Tuesday next. The jury stood 6 for a conviction and 6 for acquittal. This case has been watched with much interest. It has cost the county thousands of dollars, and when is it going to end? The prosecution weakened its cause at the outset, by moving on Monday that a nolle prosequi be entered, as a conviction could not be had, but Judge Briggs overruled the motion, and the trial went on. It now looks as though Judge McQuaid was level-headed when he intimated that a conviction would not be obtained.

Bodie's Boom

Getting Vaccinated.—Word having been brought here that smallpox had broken out at Walker Lake the Indians in this section have this week been getting vaccinated in droves, they having gone to Bodie to have the operation performed by Doctors Anderson and Deal. Many of the bucks made the trip on horseback, while their squahalas—dutiful wives—trudged along on foot.—There is much in having wives properly trained to insure happiness—to the husband.

Surprise Party.—On Wednesday evening N. B. Hunnewill and wife were the victims of a quasi-surprise party at their hospitable mansion, 6 miles from town. A large party went from Bridgeport, and with Captain Porter to furnish the music, a good time was had, dancing being indulged in until after midnight.

Social Dance.—On Tuesday evening a social dance was given at Allen's Hotel by the Bridgeport Masons in compliment to the members of that Ancient and Honorable Order, from Bodie, who are in attendance on the Superior Court. It was a very pleasant affair.

Courts.—Superior Court, Department No 1, Judge Briggs, presiding, will open on Monday next; and Department No 2, Judge Wiggins, presiding, will also open on Monday.

Transferred.—The case of Haight, one of the Bodie bullion gang, was on Monday last transferred by Judge Briggs, to Department No 2.

Put off.—On Monday Job Draper, the wife murderer, was brought before Judge Briggs, who set his trial for June 9.

Rose Colored.—The Free Press account of the Sweetwater mines was "too sweet for anything."

"Cigar" is the new shade of brown. A first-rate thing for the country newspaper man to puff.—Exchange.

Bodie Free Press please note.

Another.—The Headlight delinquent stock sale has again been prosponed till the 20th.

Removing.—The archives of Mono county are being removed from the old tumble-down shanty down town to the new Court House, and next week the County Clerk and Sheriff will be "at home" in their new quarters. No cards, but terms cash!

Returning.—Judge Wiggin, who has been absent the past ten days on account of the sickness and death of his father, which sad event occurred in Alameda last week, will return to-morrow by way of Sweetwater.

Breezy.—A heavy wind has prevailed all day, and in fact, it has been more or less breezy all this week, which has been everything but pleasant, and our barometer does not promise any better weather in the near future.

And Again.—Sam Chung will be brought before Judge Briggs at 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning next, when a day will be set for his third trial.

In Order.—Superior Court room, Department No. 2, is being put in order for the opening of Court by Judge Wiggin on Monday next.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

"Uneasy the head that wears a crown," or taking one consideration with another, the life of a President is not a happy one, and Gen. Garfield, I am sure, does not find in his high office much to please and make him aware of his honor, other than the countless hordes of greedy office hunters, who crowd about and upon him like ravenous wolves. In spite of his earnest endeavors to choose the best men; to treat all factions of the party alike, there come to Washton mutterings from almost every State in the Union over some well considered action of the President in the matter of appointments. In New York the Conklingites, notwithstanding the fact that their services in the last campaign are being well rewarded, make a great to-do because the President nominated Judge Robertson—one of the men to whom he owes his nomination—to be Collector of the port of New York.—From Illinois there comes a loud complaint because the President granted Senator Logan's request, and nominated "Long Joner," as Marshal for the Northern District of the State, and some of them boldly assert they will never pass the portals of the White House during the term of the present Administration. The appointment of Wm. E. Chandler to be Solicitor of the Treasury in place of Mr. Phillips, is causing much unfavorable comment from the friends of the latter. Attorney General McVeagh also has his finger in the pie, and is in a great huff. He also protests against the confirmation of Stanley Matthews, and even carries his meddlesomeness to Illinois to combat Long Joues. In fact, the most confirmed skeptic of Civil Service reform need only visit the White House, and witness the struggle there, to be made an enthusiast. There is no denying the fact that before long it will become necessary to take stringent measures for the protection of the President, and to remove him from the maddened hordes which for the month past have swarmed the Executive mansion. With a population of fifty millions, the executive officials are nearly worried to death with applications. The state of things when the population is larger, and patronage more, is fearful to contemplate, and brings to one very forcibly the growing and soon to be absolute need for a practical and efficient system of civil service reform in this country.

The Democratic organ in this city, the Post, comes out this morning in a long leader indorsing Secretary Blaine, and winds it up, "This may not do him any good, but it will at least please us,—and that is something, which, like virtue, sits own reward."

MAXWELL.

Means Business.—A company has been duly incorporated in San Francisco, within the past week, with $2,500,000 capital, for the purpose of constructing a narrow-guage road from the metropolis of our coast, through Modesto—so named in the incorporation "bond"—to Sonora; on a line that is to go thence over the Sierra unto and into Nevada. We take it that this means business. Mr. Davis, who is the head of the Santa Cruz narrow-guage R. R. Co., and who is supposed in railroad matters to represent the bonanza millionaire firm, is at the head of the subscription list: and we have good authority for imagining, to say the least, that the $30,000,000 railroad investment company of Boston, who are at work in Colorado on narrow railroad projects, have a distinct understanding with the bonanza firm to meet and lock rails in Central Nevada. A strong confirmation of all this, and that the project is a bona-fide through Modesto, across the continent job, is found in the undoubted fact that the Central Pacific Railroad Company is buying up land on this probable route, from Oakland to the foothills, and in San Ramon and Livermore valleys, with the evident purpose of hampering the practical carrying out of the scheme referred to, by extortionate demands for right of way, etc. We think, however, that this is not the wisest course that the Central Pacific Railroad monopoly could pursue, and is not likely to prove a success, for reasons that may be obvious on slight reflection, and for some reasons to which we may hereafter call special attention.—Stanislaus News.

On March 31st, Department No. 1, Supreme Court, decided, estate of Page, deceased, that an administrator has no power to make a contract with an attorney, binding upon the estate, for the transfer of an interest in any of the assets of the estate, or for the payment of a contingent fee out of assets of the estate. The fee must be fixed and allowed by the Court.

At Dutch Flat, about ten miles from The Dalles, Or., an eruption lately occurred, throwing out rocks weighing several tons making an excavation about sixty feet in diameter, the depth of which could not be ascertained, as it immediately filled with water. The cause of the eruption cannot be ascertained.

A S. F. Call reporter called at jail to see Wheeler, under sentence of death for the strangling of his sister-in-law. He found two lady visitors in the cell, and a number of beautiful boquets, presented by visitors during the day, tastefully arranged on a little stand. What a mystery woman is!

THE UNION.

BRIDGEPORT, APRIL 9, 1881.

HOUSE AND FARM.

How to Plant Alfalfa.—Judge R. L. Dixon of the Buena Vista ranch, Kern county, gives his experience in raising alfalfa, which, when known, must change the mode of making this crop in this county at least. Last year he took a section of land, plowed and harrowed 150 acres, and sowed in alfalfa in the usual way. The remainder of the section he sowed with the seed, with the land in the natural state. After the sowing he harvested the crop once each way, and then turned water on. He did not begin his planting till March, and did not finish till May. All who know that section of the country can realize the difficulties with which the seed would have to contend. The soil is strong in alkali, most if it baked which requires heavy teams to break it. The seed was sown without any removal even of the weeds which on a good deal of the ground were thick. Before fall he invited many to look at his crop, and all could see that the stand of alfalfa on the unplowed portion was, in every respect, equal to that on the ground tilled. It was a complete success. If this can be done on such unpromising soil as his, what folly it would seem to be to spend time and money in plowing and harrowing the greater part of the alluvial lands of the Kern River bottom. Most of the lands are sandy, are soft with sediment, and even where packed by stock nothing is needed to loosen them but the water. Some years ago Dr. Ormsby, living two miles from Bakersfield, planted about twenty acres in this way, in a favorable season, which astonished those who saw it in its luxurant growth.—Kern County Gazette.

For export to warm climate, the French pack butter in one and two pound bottles. The mouths are two inches in diameter, glass stopped and cemented with plaster of Pasis. The butter is packed fresh, and a tablespoonful of white pearly salt, the most impalpably fine, and exquisitely pure, is put into the neck of the bottle and the stopper applied. Shipments to Ceylon from the United States and France—the former in tin and the latter in glass, afford an unfavorable contrast in quality from this country, being spoiled by corosion of the tin, or using impure salt.

All soils are improved by mixing. The physical properties of the soil have an important influence upon its average fertility. The admixture of pure sand with clay soil produces an alteration which is often beneficial, and which is almost wholly mechanical. The sand opens the pores of the clay and makes it more permeable to the air.

Put glass into cold water, add common salt and boil well and then cool. It will resist changes of temperature.

A young man, on becoming affianced, was desirous of presenting his intended with a ring appropriately inscribed; but being at a loss what to have engraved upon it he asked the old gentleman, "Put on, 'When this you see, remember me.'" The young lady was surprised, upon receipt of the ring a few days after, to read this inscription: "When this you see, remember father."

The ladies have taken so much to wearing the costumes of men that it is difficult to tell which is which, especially when the hair is cropped short in front. A cabman who had driven his passenger to the proper place, respectfully said; "Thank you, sir!" as his fare was handed him by a fair lady in a Derby hat and a long brown ulster.

Father—"Now, my boy, I've been making my will, and I've left a very large property in trust for you. I merely wish to ask you if you've any suggestion to offer?" Son—"Well, I don't know that I have, sir—unless—hum'—as things go nowadays, wouldn't it be better to leave the property to the other boy, and—appoint me the trustee?"

In the disturbed condition of Ireland, a physician being called to see a dying landlord, entered the room with a cheerful smile, and rubbing his hands, remarked that it was certainly a matter of congratulation in these days when a man dies quietly in his bed instead of being shot by his tenants.

A wife, having lost her husband, was inconsolable for his death. "Leave me to my grief," she cried sobbing; "you know the extreme sensibility of my nerves; a mere nothing upsets them."

It is the confession of a widower, who has been thrice married, that the first wife cures a man's romance; the second teaches him humility; the third makes him a philosopher.
